

JOURNAL OF ORTHOMOLECULAR
MEDICINE

Published since 1967

Call for Papers

Dr. Abram Hoffer, MD, PhD, (1917 – 2009) was an innovative and pioneering scientist and psychiatrist who developed the first evidence-based nutritional approach to support recovery among patients with psychotic episodes and schizophrenia.

As a tribute to his decades-long contributions as a psychiatrist and clinician researcher, the Canadian College of Naturopathic Medicine, with the generous support of orthomolecular medicine, is pleased to announce a Call for Papers:

All eligible papers must focus on an aspect of orthomolecular treatment in the provision of patient care according to the submission guidelines on the CCNM website. The winning paper will receive a $1,500 prize, will be featured at the upcoming Abram Hoffer Lecture Series event, to be held at CCNM in the fall of 2018, and will be published in the Journal of Orthomolecular Medicine.

We welcome submissions from the naturopathic community, including students, interns, and naturopathic doctors.

The submission guidelines can be found at www.ccnm.edu/abramhoffer